THE GAME BEFORE LAST: WELCOME TO THE 200 CLUB

The Chicago Sky earned their 200th franchise victory on Friday night, 99-83, a nearly coast-to-coast win over the New York Liberty at Wintrust Arena that featured just two lead changes. Chicago posted season highs in points, assists, field-goal percentage, and free-throw attempts. Courtney Vandersloot dished 12 assists and contributed an efficient 17 points on 5-for-7 shooting. Four other Sky players scored in double figures, including Jantel Lavender, who also tallied 17 points to go with 7 rebounds. Stefanie Dolson posted a season-high nine rebounds, and three familiar faces made their Sky returns. Jamiera Faulkner made her long-awaited season debut after recovering from back-to-back season-ending ACL injuries, Katie Lou Samuelson returned from a month-long injury absence and Astou Ndour played in her first game since June 1 after playing overseas.

DIAMOND DESHIELDS DOES DALLAS

Diamond DeShields led the Sky to an 89-79 victory in Dallas, scoring 10 of her season-high 26 points in the fourth quarter. Chicago, which leads the WNBA in 3-point field goals made and 3-point percentage, outscored Dallas by 21 points from the 3-point line, shooting 55.5% from deep compared to Dallas’ 22.2%. Courtney Vandersloot tallied eight assists, while Jantel Lavender contributed 16 points and seven rebounds. In the game, the Sky totaled 26 assists and just 10 turnovers and shot over 50 percent from the field for the second consecutive game. Chicago was able to pull away from Dallas for good after a 31-13 third quarter.

TONIGHT’S OPPONENT: ATLANTA DREAM

The Sky possess a 26-18 all-time record against the Dream and stand 14-7 against Atlanta at home.

HOW WE FARED AGAINST THE DREAM LAST SEASON

Last season, Atlanta won two of the three games in which the teams played. While Sky point guard Courtney Vandersloot was sidelined for the first matchup, she averaged nine assists over the final two meetings between the teams. In 2017, the Sky won the season series 3:1.

THE SKY'S ALL-STAR TRIO

Diamond DeShields, Allie Quigley, and Courtney Vandersloot were named All-Star reserves this past weekend, making the Sky the only team other than the Aces to possess three All-Stars this season. Vandersloot easily leads the WNBA in assists per game with 8.2 and has moved up to seventh on the league’s all-time assists list. In her tenth professional season, Quigley has made the most 3-pointers in the league and ranks second in 3-point percentage, shooting an impressive 48% from long distance. DeShields will be making her first All-Star game appearance in her second WNBA season.

3-POINT PARTY

The Sky lead the WNBA this season in both 3-pointers made and 3-point percentage, a credit to head coach James Wade’s fast-paced offensive approach, the team’s dynamic ball movement, and its excellent long-range shooting. Chicago has drilled 127 deep balls so far this season for a percentage of 36.6.

In five of the Sky’s 17 games this season, the team has converted at least 40% of its three-point opportunities. Over Chicago’s past two games, it has shot a combined 50% from deep (16-for-32). In Dallas on Sunday, the Sky shot a blistering 55% from behind the arc, sinking 11 of their 20 3-point attempts. Diamond DeShields led the way draining five of her own, while Jantel Lavender and Allie Quigley each added a pair of 3s.

HOLY ASSISTS-TO-TURNOVER RATIO

The Sky’s assists-to-turnover ratio has been an absurdly impressive 2.26 over their past three games, comprising ratios of 26:10, 30:12, and 21:12. To put this dominance into perspective, the team’s ratio for the season overall is 1.36. In Chicago’s last game, it went the entire first quarter without a turnover. Given how much the Sky struggled with turnovers early in the season, their newfound ball security is especially promising.

THE BENCH EDGE

Chicago’s bench ranks second in the WNBA this season in field-goal percentage at 42.5 percent, while Atlanta’s ranks dead last at 35.9 percent. In the Sky’s last game, Chicago’s bench shot 50% and out-scored the Wings’ bench 20-11.

Gabby Williams, Cheyenne Parker, and Kahleah Copper have been the Sky’s key contributors off the bench this season. Parker averages 5.5 rebounds per game and, along with Williams and Copper, has provided clutch scoring. Williams has been a strong distributor for the Sky this season in her second WNBA season.
